

Reflection

Overall this was a really fun assignment to get back into the groove of everything and put some of our prior knowledge to use. Overall I was impressed with all that I remembered and how easily it came back with a little push. All that being said I chose to create a cookie for my favorite food assignment as they have been my current obsession. It was overall a relatively easy concept to bring to fruition as it is just a circle, but adding all the chocolate chips was a bit more time-consuming and was some great coordinate practice. I added some stripes as background decoration as I thought it still looked quite simple. Then on the other hand we have what ChatGPT created which was a bit more chaotic as it had all the chips moving in different directions and fast at that as well. I thought it looked more like a bunch of really fast flies circling their less-than-pleasant meal. I will say that this was not AI's finest moment and shows that it has a long way to go.