I generated my AI image from a website called DeepAI. I chose to do a frog because for whatever reason I decided all of my images were going to be pond related. This website had an option for different “themes” which I would consider art styles personally but it was fun to look through them. I chose Oragami which game by this fun-looking guy. This frog however does appear to have some missing and possibly broken legs. This was both what and not what I expected as it does in fact look like a frog made from Oragmi. That being said his limbs seem out of wack like he went through a shuffle or two before he arrived. Overall super fun image just a bit goofier than expected.
